Highlights

- Carbon pricing slows replenishment speed that is bought with fuel
- Speed bought with labor, such as team drivers, is favored under a carbon price
- Electric last-mile vans favor fewer distribution centers; heavy diesel, more
- The joint speed and density design is unique at every carbon price
- Four carbon-per-dollar ratios and one pooling share classify each product